Market Review

During November, global equity markets rebounded with MSCI All Country World Index climbing 3.8% taking year-to-date returns to 20.9% in dollars. MSCI Asia ex-Japan however, experienced negative returns for second month in a row, declining 3.3% in dollars. November was a challenging month for the region as markets grappled with potential impacts of a Trump presidency which may include increased tariff and a stronger U.S. dollar.

Korea, China and Taiwan were the worst performing markets in the region, 6.0%, 4.4% and 4.6% respectively in dollars. Chinese markets continued to decline as the stimulus package underwhelmed market expectations. Additionally, Trump's victory and the Republican sweep heightened concerns about tariff hikes on China's exports to the US and the impact on regional supply chain activity. Additionally, Taiwan's slowdown was attributed due to concerns over slower growth in the semiconductor sector. Korea was also dragged down by similar concerns.

India outperformed other regions but still delivered mildly negative return of 0.4% in dollars. In the first half of the month, the market declined over global economic factors, mixed festive season, local policy changes and subdued earnings dampened investor sentiment. However, towards the end of the month, equities staged a recovery in anticipation of policy continuity post state elections which saw the BJP-led Mahayuti secure a win in Maharashtra state election.

Economic data points varied across the region. Manufacturing PMIs across China, Singapore, South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand and Philippines expanded. On the other hand, India, Indonesia and Malaysia contracted. In October, China's CPI came in at 0.3% marking the 9th consecutive month of consumer inflation but was the lowest reading since June. On the other hand, India's CPI soared to 6.2% in October amid moderate wage growth but saw Q2FY25 GDP slide to 5.4%, well below market expectations of a 6.5% to record the softest pace of growth since the December quarter of 2022. In terms of policy action, Bank of Korea made a surprise interest rate cut of 25bps to 3.0% towards the end of November as economic growth dampened and policy makers stay wary of Trump 2.0.

Investment Strategy

We remain positive on Asian equity markets as both top down and bottom-up factors are supportive.

From a top-down perspective, we expect financial conditions to improve as central banks across the region are likely to pursue more growth-oriented policies. From, a bottom-up perspective we remain positive on growth across key geographies/sectors.

Chinese equities are likely to remain volatile, but the synchronized monetary and fiscal stimulus unveiled by China in end September should put a floor on Chinese equities. However, risk of tariffs and continuing deflationary pressures on the economy imply that the market direction will be dependent on further stimulus measures.

Outside of China we expect earnings for the Information Technology sector to remain supported, driven largely by AI thematic and associated capital expenditure.

Lastly, India is experiencing a near-term downward adjustment in growth expectations, but its medium-term structural story, driven by rising investments remains intact. Following the recent GDP slowdown due to a sharp reduction in government capital expenditure and gross capital formation, we expect the government to increase spending in the second half of the year with a strong emphasis on infrastructure. Additionally, we expect the RBI to officially shift its stance to neutral, which is expected to boost market liquidity.

Valuations for Asia are also supportive as MSCI Asia ex-Japan Index is still trading near its 5 year mean PER valuations of around 13x which is reasonable for the mid-teens earnings growth expectations for the region.
