Market Review

During November, global equity markets rebounded with the MSCI All Country World Index climbing 3.8% and delivered a return of 20.9% year-to-date in dollars. Most Asian markets declined during the month due to the headwinds from the Trump presidency, increased tariff threats and a strengthening U.S. dollar.

MSCI China declined by 4.4% in November in dollars, following an underwhelming NPC which unveiled a RMB10trn local government debt swap package but no consumption stimulus. Additionally, Trump's victory and the Republican sweep heightened concerns about tariff hikes on China's exports to the US and the impact on regional supply chain activity. On a sector level, Information Technology and Health Care eked out positive returns. On the other hand, the worst performers included Real Estate, Consumer Discretionary and Energy.

Economic data released over the month was mixed. The economy expanded 4.6% year-on-year in Q3 of 2024. The Caixin China Manufacturing PMI rose further to 51.5 points from 50.3 points in October. The Caixin Services PMI contracted to 51.5 and the construction PMI dropped unexpectedly into contractionary territory at 49.7, signaling some downside risk to construction activity in November. The CPI increased by 0.2% year-on-year, compared to a 0.3% rise in the previous month. As for October data, Retail sales rose 4.8% year-on-year benefiting from the trade-in subsidy and Golden Week Holiday. Exports came in stronger than expected on a 12.7% year-on-year and trade surplus widened to $95.7 billion.

Investment Strategy

We expect following policies package would include expanded fiscal stimulus such as higher deficit of 4%, injection into SOE banks for tier 1 capital as well as special government bond issuance to support consumption. The US election would lead to export pressure, but we guess the magnitude would be milder comparing with 2018-2019 cycle given the export to the US declined from 20% to 15%. A share market is strongly correlated to continue policy efforts. So the correct expectation on policy efforts is quite key. Sector rotation would be the theme for quite some time. We would focus on the efficiency improvements of domestic SOE companies as well as domestic innovative companies which would demonstrate strong global competitiveness amid tariff pressure.

In the near-term, the Central Economic Work Conference held on December 11-12th is a key market focus. The conference is expected to announce quantitative policy guidance for strengthened counter-cyclical, growth supportive macro policy through numerical targets such as annual GDP growth target and fiscal budget.
