Market Review

Asian credit markets had a mixed performance in November. The Investment Grade (IG) segment performed well, driven by duration-related gains. However, returns in the non-Investment Grade (non-IG) segment underperformed due to headwinds arising from widening credit spread action.

On a country level, in November, Sri Lanka emerged again as a strong performer delivering substantial positive returns as the country's debt restructuring efforts seemed to have made further progress. Taiwan and Malaysia also performed positively supported by favourable US treasury returns. On the flipside, Pakistan was the weakest performer, while India was dragged down by Adani's bribery allegation charges by the US SEC.

Sector wise, the Oil & Gas, Industrial and Diversified sectors all registered strong performance, supported by a combination of favourable US treasury returns and spread tightening actions. Conversely, the Real Estate sector underperformed the most, due to idiosyncratic events around Hong Kong credit. The Infrastructure and Utilities sectors also faced challenges, directly in reflection to the sell-off in bond prices within the Adani complex.

Investment Strategy

Our 2025 outlook envisions a resilient global economy, driven by robust U.S. growth that contrasts with ongoing challenges in China. Regional divergence in growth and inflation dynamics is likely to result in greater variation in central bank actions, leading to a less synchronised global monetary policy environment. Europe is expected to implement significant easing measures, while the Federal Reserve (Fed) maintains a measured approach, supported by strong U.S. economic momentum. In China, policymakers are likely to continue fiscal and monetary support, complemented by a gradual RMB depreciation, as they work to stabilise growth and mitigate downside risks.

Strategically, we remain bullish, maintaining a buy-the-dip approach that reflects our confidence in underlying market resilience. This strategy will only shift if we encounter significant changes such as quantitative tightening, rate hikes, or unexpected policy shifts from the incoming U.S. administration. Tactically, we are taking a cautious pause, acknowledging that markets may consolidate and remain directionless as investors await clarity on the Trump administration's policy agenda.

The risk-reward profile for long-end rates remains unattractive, leading us to adopt a tactical approach focused on swift profit-taking or disciplined loss-cutting for positions in this segment. In credit markets, while some idiosyncratic risks have emerged, we do not foresee major selloffs before year-end, supported by stable technicals and solid fundamentals. Elsewhere, we continue to focus on short-dated, yield-efficient securities to optimise carry while maintaining flexibility.

Looking ahead to 2025, we will remain vigilant, closely monitoring shifts in U.S. fiscal, trade, and monetary policies as the Trump administration's agenda takes shape. These developments could significantly influence market dynamics, and we are prepared to proactively adjust our portfolio to align with emerging risks and opportunities. This disciplined and adaptive approach ensures that our portfolio remains resilient and well-positioned to navigate market volatility while capturing value in the evolving macroeconomic landscape.
